

Hyde War Memorial Hall 'Art Space' welcomes

Kate Smith, presenting unique and detailed linocut prints.

“Kate is a self-taught printmaker. She took evening classes in printmaking where she fell in love with the feeling of carving lino and the process of printing. She now lives and works in the New Forest where she finds inspiration from the surroundings of the beautiful National Park. She is a proud member of the New Forest Marque Inspired.

She uses her drawing skills to create images of wildlife, plants and trees. Her fascination with biodiversity is reflected in her work; from close up images of tiny elements in nature, such as micro fungi, to larger creatures such as whale sharks. Each print shows the unique relationship between the main subject and its habitat. Her love of bold colour and detailed mark marking makes her style varied; moving between detailed one block prints to colourful multi-plate images.”

Kate's pictures are for sale and each is labelled and priced separately.

Please contact Kate directly if you wish to make an enquiry.
